Marine/Vessel Fire Experience:

US Navy (1961 to 1965) - Served on USS Patrick Henry SSBN 599 (submarine, ballistic, nuclear) and USS Tigron SS419 - WWII fleet submarine - Missile Launch Technician and Torpedomen.
Developed an understanding of ships, and working knowledge of propulsion systems, and equipment used.

US Coast Guard (1980 to 1990) – Reserves - Marine Casualty Investigator - Assigned to MSO San Francisco - Coast Guard Investigations at Coast Guard Island, Alameda, CA. - Conducted numerous investigations in the maritime field with responsibilities including the investigations in the grounding, collisions, sinking of vessels, and vessel fires.

Major Vessel Investigations:

Investigation of the “Puerto Rican”, a tanker which caught fire off the San Francisco coast and sank.
The vessel bow and a tank were towed into San Francisco bay for examination. Mr. Perkins was assigned to the Marine Board of Inquiry for the loss and provided information as to possible causes as well as research on the vessel. The research was conducted by diving down to the remains of the vessel, collecting evidence and photographing damage from underwater.

The “Honda Blue Hawk” was carrying hundreds of new 1986 Honda’s, when it caught fire off the coast of California. After its extinguishment it was towed into San Francisco bay where Mr. Perkins examined the vessel and participated in the investigation for the Coast Guard. Since the fire occurred in International waters and the ship was registered in Japan, no formal report was provided.

An explosion and fire on the USS Hess, located at the AAA Naval Shipyard in San Francisco, resulted in a fatality. Mr. Perkins was involved directly with the investigation to determine origin and cause of the explosion.

In 2012, Mr. Perkins conducted the investigation of an explosion and fire on the M/V Jupiter, a large container vessel, with a fire and explosion in the engine room, with injuries at sea. The vessel was examined for origin and cause of the incident with a successful conclusion in the port of Mazatlán, Mexico.

Mr. Perkins has provided expert witness information for the federal government and the US Attorney General's office in San Diego on a suspected fire and sinking of a vessel suspected of carrying narcotics.

As a private investigator with Fire Cause Analysis, Mr. Perkins has investigated dozens of fires of all types of vessels, including large sailboats, yachts, pleasure craft, fishing vessels and commercial vessels, including the "Argo Commodore" from the San Francisco "Red & White" fleet, the 208' – M/V - "Alaska Spirit" - large commercial fish processing vessel out of Seward, Alaska, the Motor Yacht "Mi Baur" 92' Hatteras-La Paz Mexico, the 102'–steel hull - motor yacht "Polar Bear" in San Pedro, California, the Motor Tug "Chief"- San Diego, and the "Tahoe Queen" paddle wheeler in Lake Tahoe.
